

Rubric for Lab Report - "Finding Your Spot"

Assessment	Completion of report	Association of SSS stating	Association of Goal 3 standard stating
Exceptional	Report is complete with all areas of student input completed, insightful conclusion, and the correct grid square associated with the letter, X, Y, or Z, of the lab.	Conclusion shows the student's understanding that the scientific community is constantly checking the theories and hypotheses published by its members to help find the true answers to a multitude of questions regarding matter, our world, and the universe.	Conclusion shows the student's reasoning ability in determining that forces are the underlying control factor in determining the existence of the bodies of the universe as well as the minute particles of matter.
Acceptable	Report is complete with all areas of student input completed and the correct grid square associated with the letter, X, Y, or Z, of the lab.	Conclusion shows the student's partial understanding that the scientific community is constantly checking the theories and hypotheses published by its members to help find the true answers to a multitude of questions regarding matter, our world, and the universe.	Conclusion shows the student's partial reasoning ability in determining that forces are the underlying control factor in determining the existence of the bodies of the universe as well as the minute particles of matter.
Unacceptable	Report is incomplete, with incorrect grid square associated with the letter X, Y, or Z of the lab.	Conclusion shows the student has no understanding that the scientific community is constantly checking the theories and hypotheses published by its members to help find the true answers to a multitude of questions regarding matter, our world, and the universe.	Conclusion shows the student has no reasoning ability in determining that forces are the underlying control factor in determining the existence of the bodies of the universe as well as the minute particles of matter.