

Wedge

A wedge is made by putting two inclined planes together. They come together to form a V-shape. A wedge may be used to lift or pry apart heavy objects. A wedge has only one part. The force and the load move in different directions. As the force moves the ax down, the load, (wood) would break apart and fall to the sides.

